This website is about whatever thing comes to my mind. It's just articles because I get bored easily, so I tend to write when this happens, and about what I'm gonna write about, it just depends on how I'm feeling and what things I've discovered recently. And that's about all there is to this website.

If it's running slow, maybe try to disable extensions, because I have one that for some reason loads up like 40 scripts that don't change anything on the page.

By the way, don't worry, I'm really good with technology, so you can trust me on this, also you're gonna see a lot of tech-related articles, because it's fun and because that way I can post it on the r/Programming subreddit and gain attention from the 1.2 million people in there.

If you've noticed, there is a view counter thingy on every article (even in the contact page), because I wanna test to see how many people trust me to click on the link to this website and probably read the article. Just a funny addition because I'm always curious about stuff. Also, I wanna make this article longer because yes, so I like playing chess, just so you know, and apart from working on this website with my friend, I'm doing a wix site for my IT class, just another thing to make this text longer hehe.
